Joshua Tree, California

Not many places in the US have as many rocks as does Joshua Tree. There are more than 5,000 routes in the park! You'll find also many excellent boulderings as good as anywhere else. The sharp granite offers excellent friction. If your trill is to do first ascent, you'll never leave Josh. Just in the more developed area of Hidden Valley Campground, some guys from St-Louis put over 10 problems. These are Great Lines! If you happen to put up some new stuff around the area covered by this topo, why not send us the info and share your work.

How to get there: You'll find Joshua Tree Park on any map of California. It is Southeast of Barstow. Coming from the North you'll enter the park either by Joshua Tree (the city) or 29 Palms. They'll give you a map at the entrance of the park. You want to go to Hidden Valley Campground or Ryan Campground. From there use the map on page 14. The access fee is $10 per car, $25 for a year pass or "free" with the Golden Eagle Access ($65). To pay your fee, it's better not to arrive or leave late evening or during the night when there are no rangers to collect the money...

When: This is a winter area, so from late fall to early spring. In March it starts to be warm. However the nights are cold so bring warm clothes and firewood.

Eat: Joshua Tree (the city) is the closest town (15 miles). You'll find some small groceries and good cafes. Yucca Valley is 5 miles further west and has big stores and fast foods. THERE IS NO WATER IN THE PARK.

Sleep: One of the best things in Josh: free camping. Once you're in the park, you'll enjoy nice campsites (that you might have to share) for free. Picnic tables, fireplaces and restrooms. There is a 14 days limit.
