

Frugal FAQ

How do I find you?

Originally I was going to adorn myself with a tiny blinking martini glass. But, to my dismay, I found out that was already taken. So Plan B... (1) print out my picture (2) bring along my cell number (3) arrive on time (4) look for me and Natasha (the hottie in the picture with me), usually standing in line with a very diverse looking group of people (5) if you don't find us just go in and have a good time. Note: if you're late it is doubtful you will find us. Sometimes the venue changes it's policy about where the line starts. You have to be flexible. And remember, once the concert starts I will have to turn off my cell phone.

What if I RSVP 'Yes' and don't show?

Clicking 'Yes' is a commitment. You should make every effort to attend. If you are a person who doesn't keep their word it will show up in other areas in your life and you'll be miserable. It's better to be wishy-washy than to have no integrity: click 'Maybe.' If however there is limited seating and the event is posted as 'NO FLAKES,' then if you don't show up you'll be flagged as a FLAKE and banned. Seriously.

How much does it cost?

You would not believe how often we're asked this. Let's think about this... This is the LA Free Concerts Meetup, right? But you ask, what about the Hollywood Bowl concert? Well, you got me there. Those of you who don't hike up the back of the hill and climb the fence will have to pay a nominal ticket fee. Freewill offering: usually a church will ask for a small donation and you better pay it or else your karma will be screwed.

Where do I park?

Ah, you've discovered the only catch here at LA Free Concerts. Oftentimes you will have to pay to park at the venue. On the other hand, many venues have free or street parking. We'll try to give you a head's up. Just remember to bring a few dollars to be on the safe side.

Do I need reservations?

Usually no, just show up. If however you do need a reservation, a link will be posted that will provide all the details. Please request as many tickets as possible, then post that you have extra tickets so the rest of us can go, too.

What is the dress code?

At an indoor classical concert, the old dudes typically wear a sport coat and slacks. The younger set wear jeans or whatever. If you're single, dress like you're going on a date because you just never know...

What is a NO HOST EVENT?

That means the organizer will not be attending and is posting the event FYI. In other words, every man for himself.

What if I would like to carpool?

We here at LA Free Concerts truly and wholeheartedly believe in the global warming hysteria and encourage all of our members to carpool as a means of preventing the planet from turning into a barren rock. When you RSVP just type in "Anybody want to carpool from blank" and you're on your way. Pun intended. Insert your town, village or trailer park for blank.

What time does the concert start?

The time posted is the time you need to be in line at the venue. The actual concert usually begins a half hour to an hour later. This is so they can let their paying members in first to get the best seats before the cheapskates.

What does frugal mean?

Costing little; inexpensive. If that's what you're looking for, then you're in the right place.

Disclaimer

The opinions expressed here definitely do not represent the views of our fearless frugal leader Rolando. They may represent the opinions of his dedicated, stalwart AO Lionel, but he won't say for sure. Any politically incorrect and offensive opinions expressed here definitely represent the views of Lionel's girlfriend Natasha whether or not she is aware he is writing this without her knowledge or approval.