

Tube the Esopus.

Since the days of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn, the image of floating down a river on a hot summer day has always created a sense of adventure.

Located in the heart of the Catskill Mountains is a five-mile stretch of river that has become one of the most popular tubing courses around. People come from all over to ride the rapids and drift with the current as the Esopus Creek winds through the beautiful mountains and greenery of the Catskills. Esopus Creek is part of the New York City watershed, and is used to transfer water to the Ashokan Reservoir by way of the Shandaken Portal. Four times a year, depending on watershed conditions, the portal is opened wider, providing higher, faster water for even more exciting tubing! July 13th and August 31st are some of those dates.

Dates- Sunday July 13th or August 31st.

$65.00 per person. Transportation, Seated Tube, Life Jacket, Tube Taxi included.
