WordPress is one of the premier, open-source, free, Content Management Systems (CRMs) used to design and build websites and blogs.

WordCamps are casual, locally-organized conferences covering WordPress topics which include sessions on how to use WordPress more effectively, beginning plugin and theme development, advanced techniques, security, and much more...

WordCamp is being held for the first time in Rhode Island!

This day-long conference is for everyone from beginners to designers and developers. There will be three tracks of speaker presentations to address these areas with additional speakers on using WordPress in education and for freelance purposes. WordCamps are attended by people ranging from blogging newbies to professional WordPress designers, developers and consultants that participate, share ideas, and get to know each other and is always an amazing and unique event.
